About OPC Youth Camps...

Orthodox Presbyterian Youth Camps are common to the seventeen regions that comprise the OPC presbyteries in the United States. The camps in the Presbytery of the Southwest have been an annual event in the presbytery since its formation in 1986. Youth from around the three-state region of Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma have attended this annual event in campgrounds in both New Mexico and Texas. During the past few years the youth camp has been conducted in the Dallas/Fort Worth area. This year the camp will be in the Amarillo, Texas area. A site is being sought for 2011.

The presbytery youth camp can be characterized as an emphasis upon the ministry of God's Word and the development of friendships among campers and with the staff. Each year a camp theme is supported with preaching texts and topical presentations, each designed to develop the theme. Mature and gifted OPC camp counselors facilitate discussions around the theme. Meal times, sports events and other activities are always a great source of constructive relationship-building.

This year the age limit has been lowered from the 6th to the 4th grade, and stretches up to 20 years of age. Individualized programs are planned for the respective age groups. If you have any questions about the camp, you are encouraged to contact the Camp Committee. Take full advantage of the Early Bird Discounts to ensure a place at camp. The discounts are in effect until March 17, 2010. Family discounts with two or more campers are also available.

You will find the OPC presbytery camp experience provides campers with a week of learning, growth and relationship-building that's economically superior in comparison to other summer youth camps.
